Within the report, Elevate outlines recent actions guided by its Ten Threads of Sustainability, an internal program that shapes the company's sustainable decision-making to best support the achievement of its 2025 and 2030 goals and increase transparency and traceability across its programs. The report shares Elevate's participation and leadership in industry collaborations and alignment with the UN Global Compact's Ten Principles, specifically highlighting the company's actions that directly support UN Sustainable Development Goal commitments.

"In this year's report, we are pleased to announce our 2030 goals, along with our progress towards our 2025 goals," said Jimmy Summers, Chief Sustainability Officer, Elevate Textiles. "The new goals increase our levels of ambition and continue to align our company with our industry's approach to meeting our shared global sustainability targets. Our 2030 goals are supported by our strong belief that if we say we will take action, we intend to do it. We feel these targets are attainable for both our organization and the textile industry with collaborative efforts."
